With all of us in mind

What is domiciliary occupational therapy?

Domiciliary care, sometimes also referred to as homecare, is the delivery of a service in an individual's own home - or a residential or nursing home.

We help people with complex disabilities and neurological impairments maximise their independence within the community.

What do we do?

The team provides a wide range of services including:

- ▶ Assessment of an individual's needs and skills
- ▶ Goal orientated programmes to improve function and independence in a wide range of day to day activities
- ▶ Physical and cognitive rehabilitation
- ▶ Neurological splinting and splint review
- ▶ Advice on positioning and posture
- ▶ Fatigue management
- ▶ Advice and training to staff, carers and other professionals

What will happen?

The therapist will discuss with you what difficulties you are having and what you want to achieve from receiving therapy. They will complete an initial assessment; this assessment is important as it determines the type of service you might be offered. The therapist will then explain what they can do for you, or who else may be able to assist you.

They will make sure that you are happy with the plan for your treatment, and any onward referrals, before they start to work with you.

The therapist will make sure that you understand what they will be doing and will write a programme or plan for further assessment and / or treatment. You can ask someone else to help, such as a therapy assistant or another therapist. They may refer you on to another agency who can help you better.

They will continue to discuss your progress with you throughout your treatment, and will clearly explain any changes that need to be made to the original plan.
